

Kineallen

A small village inhabited by humans, half-elves and a few venerable elves, located on top of a cliff, surrounded by dense and hostile vegetation. Their houses are built with living roofs of plants, which require constant care, and the daily routine is marked by difficult tasks, such as hunting and gathering wild honey.

Kineallen's economy is based on subsistence and trade, mainly with the village of Chester, which provides tools, manufactured goods and products from the south in exchange for furs, meat and honey. Their daily life is marked by the effort of surviving in a hostile environment, struggling to extract resources without destroying the natural balance around them.